

Course: overcoming compassion fatigue as mental health professionals

Address: <https://asadis.net/en/course/compassion-fatigue/>

Duration: 1h30

Type of course: continuing education

Location: online course

Individual price: $72.00

Overview:

Today's mental health crisis has led to a shortage of available therapists to meet increasing needs. Clinicians are managing heavier workloads, excessive demands, and longer hours. The pandemic stressors of COVID 19 affected clinicians as well as clients, as everyone experienced this global crisis. Many are still recovering from the trauma and impact of the pandemic lockdown and stress. Additionally, the increase in social unrest, global warming, war, injustice, gender issues, and much more have led to a heaviness in daily life for many people.

Compassion fatigue is a term used to describe the physical, emotional, and psychological impact of helping others. Clinicians are frequently exposed to traumatic stories which can be experienced as secondary traumatic stress or vicarious trauma in the nervous system. This secondary trauma can affect thoughts, moods, and well-being outside of work. Feeling stressed, overwhelmed, exhausted, burn-out, and unmotivated are all signs of compassion fatigue.

Therapists often witness situations such as threats of suicide, major depression, anxiety, chronic illness, death, grief, bereavement, psychosis, and a multitude of traumatic stories. At times clinicians may even be physically or verbally threatened. All of this coupled with the lingering stress of the pandemic and other global problems is a lot to manage.

Recognizing how trauma and stress impact the nervous system can help clinicians demystify some of the heaviness felt with compassion fatigue. Giving yourself permission to feel the feelings, practice emotional regulation, and create daily self-care routines are some keys to managing secondary trauma in the day

-to-day workload.

With this workshop, you will gain a better understanding of the impact of global stressors on the nervous system and learn to recognize how to co-regulate with clients using therapeutic empathy in clinical settings. You will also learn about practices, tools and techniques to manage stress and to implement self-care practices that calm the nervous system.

Learning objectives:

1. Analyze the impact of global stressors on the nervous system
2. Co-regulate with clients using therapeutic empathy in clinical settings
3. Practice tools and techniques to manage stress
4. Implement self-care practices that calm the nervous system

Learning material:

A theoretical course illustrated with clinical examples. This course is composed of videos of 5 to 15 minutes each. The PowerPoint of the course to download.

Audience: This training is intended for mental health professionals.

The expert, Dr. Patti Ashley

International workshop presenter, author, and psychotherapist, Dr. Patti Ashley, PhD, LPC, has integrated 40 years of experience in special education, child development, and psychology into her wholehearted work as a psychotherapist, author, and international speaker. Dr. Ashley owns and operates Authenticity Architects in Boulder, Colorado, bringing unique insights into the identification and treatment of shame, trauma, grief, and dysfunctional family patterns. She completed a PhD in psychology from the Union Institute and University, a MS in early childhood from Old Dominion University, and a BS in special education from James Madison University. She is the author of Living in the Shadow of the Too-Good Mother Archetype (2014), Letters to Freedom (2019), and Shame-Informed Therapy: Treatment Strategies to Overcome Core Shame and Reconstruct the Authentic Self (2020). For more information, please visit www.pattiashley.com

Syllabus

PowerPoint

Understanding the Mental Health Crisis and Therapeutic Foundations

Introduction

Today's mental health crisis

Polyvagal theory and the ANS

Four therapeutic R s

Right brain psychotherapy

Strategies for Resilience and Compassion in Mental Health Practice

Strategies of disconnection and defense against shame

Therapeutic empathy-four skills at once

Tools to tame stress part 1

Tools to tame stress part 2

Healing your heart

Meditation practice

Conclusion

Bibliography